ABSTRACT

A listing is given of student expenses at approximately 2,750 postsecondary institutions across the United States as reported by the institutions. Eighteen tables give data indicating average expenses for commuting students, self-supporting students, and resident students, both those living in campus housing and those in private housing. The tables also provide data showing how postsecondary educational expenses are changing and how expenses vary by College Board region. Some of the findings are: (1) The overall increase in total expenses for resident students at all types of institutions from 1976-77 to 1977-78 averages about 4 percent; (2) The difference in total expenses for resident and commuter students is approximately $500; (3) The difference in the tuition and fees between private and public institutions is $1,423 for two-year institutions and $1,855 for four-year institutions; (4) Total expenses minus tuition and fees do not vary substantially by institutional type and control. College Scholarship Service of the College Entrance Examination Board

The College Scholarship Service (CSS) is an activity of the College Entrance Examination Board, concerned with improving equal educational opportunity. The CSS through the determination of financial need assists in the equitable distribution of financial assistance to students. Its services are offered to students and their parents, to secondary schools, to noncollegiate sponsors of financial aid programs, and to all institutions of postsecondary education. Operational activities for the College Scholarship Service are performed by Educational Testing Service.

The College Entrance Examination Board is a nonprofit membership organization that provides tests and other educational services for students, schools, and colleges. The membership is composed of more than 2,000 colleges, schools, school systems, and education associations.

Summary of contents

Analyses of information on the costs of attending different types of postsecondary institutions: Eighteen tables present data indicating average expenses for resident students, both those living in campus housing and those in private housing; commuting students; and self-supporting students. The tables also provide data showing how postsecondary educational expenses are changing and how expenses vary by College Board region.

Some of the findings:

- The overall increase in total expenses for resident students at all types of institutions from 1976-77 to 1977-78 averages about 4 percent (at four-year public institutions, 4 percent, and at four-year private institutions, 5.2 percent).
- The difference in total expenses for resident and commuter students is approximately $500.
- The difference in the tuition and fees between private and public institutions is $1,423 for two-year institutions and $1,855 for four-year institutions.
- Total expenses minus tuition and fees do not vary substantially by institutional type and control.

A listing of student expenses at approximately 2,750 postsecondary institutions across the United States as reported by the institutions.

The growing need for information on expenses at postsecondary institutions

While the most important considerations in choosing a postsecondary institution are educational, a growing number of American families are concerned about educational costs. Not only lower-income families but also middle-income and upper-income families are finding it increasingly difficult to meet the costs of a college education. To cope with the problem of financing a college education, parents and students need to plan ahead. To do this effectively, information is needed about the cost of postsecondary education and the kinds of financial support available.

The purpose of this book is to provide information about the costs of pursuing education beyond high school at different institutions. To help meet these expenses, it is important for students who may lack the necessary financial resources to realize that there is help in the form of student financial aid. Much of the available financial aid is awarded on the basis of need. In order for postsecondary institutions to fairly assess the financial need of students, institutions must consider two major factors: (1) how much the family can afford to pay toward the cost of education beyond high school and (2) the expenses associated with attending a postsecondary institution. Meeting College Costs, another booklet prepared by the College Scholarship Service, provides a step-by-step outline parents and students can use to determine how much they can afford to spend for educational costs and also assists in figuring financial need.

Using this book

This book is divided into two sections. The introduction provides analyses of student-expense data on a nationwide basis. The main portion of the book lists student expenses at about 2,750 postsecondary institutions. (See page 1 for further explanation of the data collection and analysis.)

It should be remembered that the cost estimates listed were provided by the institutions themselves and are the figures typically used by these institutions in determining a student's expenses and resulting financial need. Institutions generally have various student budgets that relate to such factors as where the student lives and the size of the student's family. Therefore, this book provides four different budget types: budgets for resident students living on and off the campus, a budget for commuting students, and one for self-supporting students. These budgets for the four different student categories represent average costs, and any individual student at an institution may have expenses that vary from these. But these expense figures can be useful, particularly in helping students, parents, and school counselors make preliminary estimates of financial need using the procedures given in Meeting College Costs and work out plans for financing postsecondary education.

The data provided in this book were collected by the College Scholarship Service (CSS), an activity of the College Entrance Examination Board, that assists postsecondary institutions, states, and federal agencies in determining how much financial need a particular student has at a particular institution. The CSS itself does not grant any financial assistance, but only helps parents and students who seek financial assistance to present their financial situation clearly and assists institutions in determining the student's financial need.

What is an expense budget?

A student expense budget is meant to be all-inclusive in order to provide for both direct educational and living expenses. The expense budget for the typical student at a postsecondary institution is made up of five principal parts: tuition and fees, books and supplies, room and board, personal expenses, and transportation. In determining an individual student's financial need, the institution will begin with these items and then consider other expenses that may be necessary such as medical care, debt repayment, etc. But the basic five items are generally included in the budgets used for all students.

Tuition and fees

Tuition is the institution's charge for instruction. Fees may be charged for such services as the library, the health center, the student center, and so on. While the actual instructional costs vary from one institution to another according to the curriculum, academic level, and type of educational program offered, the amount of tuition and fees charged students is more closely related to the kind of institution they are attending. As a general rule, tuition and fees at public institutions are the lowest, particularly for students who are legal residents of the state or district in which the institution is located. However, public institutions, both two-year and four-year, typically have an additional tuition charge for students who are not legal residents of the state or district. Having to pay this "out-of-state" or "out-of-district" (in the case of two-year community colleges) tuition may make the cost of attending a public institution as high or higher than attending a private institution.

Both public and private institutions generally set their tuition charges below the real costs of providing the educational instruction. But tuition charges at private institutions usually cover a larger percentage of the real costs so they are likely to be considerably higher than those of public institutions. Proprietary schools normally set their prices to cover all their own costs.

Table 1 shows the estimated average tuition and fees for the 1977-78 academic year at public two- and four-year institutions, private two- and four-year institutions, and proprietary institutions. The amounts shown here for public institutions are the average amounts charged to students who are legal residents of the state or district in which the institution is located. A few public two-year institutions reported no tuition charge to students who were legal residents. However, over 75 percent of the two-year public institutions have tuition and fee charges higher than $239, and 25 percent reported tuition and fees of more than $515. Of the private two-year institutions 50 percent had tuition and fee charges between $1,348 and $2,185. Most (75 percent) of the public four-year institutions had tuition and fees over $475, with 25 percent having charges in excess of $783. The average additional out-of-state (or district) charges for public two- and four-year institutions are $679 and $930 respectively. Twenty-five percent of private four-year institutions reported charges of $1,840 or less; at the other end of the scale 25 percent reported tuition and fees above $3,490.

Books and supplies

Every college student has to buy books, pencils, paper, and other supplies used in his or her studies. The amount a student spends for books and supplies varies only slightly by type of institution but is generally related to the curriculum or types of classes the student selects. Typically, art and engineering students must purchase relatively expensive supplies. For example, a course in engineering may require a student to purchase a slide-rule or a small desk-calculator. Most institutions have a campus bookstore where students can purchase the books and supplies they need, including those priced lower because they have been used previously by other students. The institutions in this survey indicate that the costs of books and supplies for full-time students attending classes for nine months during 1977-78 range from $190 to $219 (see Table 2).

Room and board

In constructing a student expense budget most institutions will include living costs, which may vary depending upon the student's choice of residence. The student may choose to live in an on-campus dormitory or other institutionally operated housing, in privately owned housing such as an apartment or rooming house near the campus, or at home with his or her parents. Students who do not live at home with their parents are typically referred to as resident students (not to be confused with the term "legal residents" used in the discussion of tuition and fees), and those living at home are called commuters. Institutions with on-campus housing have reported the rate charged to students who live in the college dormitory. This rate includes a room and most meals for nine months (except for holidays and vacation periods). Institutions with no dormitory facilities and those institutions that permit students to live in off-campus housing have provided data on the average costs to students who do not live at home or in a college dormitory but rather in private housing. They must pay rent and buy their food. These costs depend on where the housing is located and whether the accommodations are shared, but off-campus housing costs generally exceed by at least $100 the amount charged to students who live in a college dormitory, except at proprietary institutions.

Commuting students, who live at home with their parents, generally do not have to spend as much for living costs as resident students because of the absence of housing charges. But families should remember that they will still need to buy food for the student and to pay for other normal living expenses.

Since classes may start early in the morning and go on until late at night, commuters may have to buy at least one meal a day on campus and usually will spend additional amounts on snacks bought in the student center or restaurants around the campus.

Table 3 shows the amounts institutions estimate their resident and commuter students should plan to spend for room and board for the normal nine-month academic year in 1977-78. The room and board costs do not vary greatly for the different types of institutions; in particular the costs at four-year institutions are very similar. Resident costs at the proprietary institutions are the highest, largely because these institutions are located in urban areas where resident facilities tend to be slightly more expensive, especially for students who must find their own housing in the community. By type of student, the study shows a difference of between $400 and $600 in room and board expenses estimated for the budgets of resident students versus that of commuting students.

Personal or other expenses

Personal or other expenses, sometimes called "miscellaneous," include items such as clothing, laundry, toothpaste and soap, recreation, medical insurance, and incidental furnishings for dormitory rooms. Many students think they can economize in this area, but as Table 4 shows, the institutions uniformly estimate that resident students as well as commuter students will spend more than $400 for these items. The average costs of personal expenses for commuter students varies by less than $50 from one institution to another.

Transportation

Almost all students must spend some money for travel. Dependent students who stay on or near the campus must travel to get there at the start of the year and return home at the end of the year. Most resident students also go home at least once or twice during the year. For the purpose of establishing a budget to be used in determining a student's need, only the costs of two round-trips home would be counted by most institutions. Students who live at home and commute to the campus have to pay almost daily transportation costs whether they use public transportation or private car. At some institutions, particularly those located in large cities, the cost of daily parking can be substantial. As Table 5 shows, all types of institutions estimate a larger amount for the average transportation expenses of commuter students than for residents. This additional amount exceeds $100 and, in the case of public four-year institutions, may be as much as $200 more.

Putting it all together

In making a total expense budget, the five budget components discussed here should be added together. Table 6 shows the average total expenses for resident and commuter students estimated by the postsecondary institutions for the 1977-78 academic year. The lowest student budgets are found at public institutions. The major reason private and proprietary institutions have larger total expenses than public institutions is because of higher tuition and fees. This point is illustrated in Table 7. When all expenses except tuition and fees are considered, the variation in the costs of attendance at different types of institutions is not great, particularly for commuting students where the maximum difference within the budget category is $164. Between four-year institutions the differences in the costs of items other than tuition vary by less than $100 for each type of student budget.

Tables 8, 9, and 10 show the average budgets for resident and commuter students at the five different types of institutions. For resident students at public institutions the largest part of the budget is room and board – about 50 percent. At private institutions, tuition and fees account for the highest proportion of costs – between 43 and 51 percent of the total costs. For resident on-campus students at public four-year institutions, tuition and fees make up about 21 percent of their total expenditures; books and supplies, 7 percent; room and board, 48 percent; transportation, 7 percent; and personal miscellaneous expenses, an additional 17 percent. As was the case last year, students who are campus residents at private four-year institutions spend 51 percent of their money on tuition and fees; 5 percent, books and supplies; 30 percent, room and board; 9 percent, personal miscellaneous expenses; and 5 percent, transportation.

Cost are changing

The total costs of a postsecondary education continue to go up. For resident students at four-year public institutions expenses not including tuition and fees went up 5.1 percent from 1976-77 to 1977-78 and at four-year private institutions 4.1 percent for the same period. The average budget minus tuition and fees for commuter students in public two-year colleges has increased $89 (4.8 percent) over the past year; the percentage increase is 2.1 for the public four-year institutions. The total budget increased 5.2 percent for resident students at private four-year institutions; the smallest increase was at two-year private institutions, 2.6 percent. For commuter students the smallest increase was at four-year public institutions, 1.6 percent. (See Tables 11 and 12.)

Increases in tuition and fees

The increase in tuition and fees for public institutions is minor. the smallest increase was at the four-year public institutions as was the case last year (Table 13). However, viewed over the six-year period, increases at public four-year institutions have amounted to 57.2 percent ($226). Tuition and fees at private four-year institutions show the greatest percentage increase – 6.3 percent over last year or 63.2 percent since 1970-71. Tuition and fees at the two-year private institutions increased 4.1 percent since last year.

The expenses of self-supporting students

So far the discussion has concerned the expenses of students who either live at home or live on or near the campus and who are dependent on their parents. Students who are not living at home, are not claimed by their parents for tax purposes, and do not receive more than $600 in financial support are generally called self-supporting. These students must typically provide for their own maintenance or living costs for a 12-month period. Therefore, the living expenses of self-supporting students are usually higher than for dependent students whose budgets are figured in most cases for nine months. Some institutions, for the purpose of determining a student's eligibility for financial aid, may use nine-month budgets for self-supporting students too.

Because self-supporting students have the responsibility for maintaining their own residence and frequently have dependents of their own, these students are more likely to have higher personal expenses than dependent students. They may also have such extra expenses as child care and outstanding debts that are not typical of the dependent student. Based on the data in this survey, the expenses of self-supporting students are larger than comparable expenses for dependent students for each of the three expense categories, excluding tuition and fees and books and supplies. The same charges for tuition and fees and books and supplies were used for dependent and self-supporting students, on the assumption that all students were attending classes for nine months.

As in the case of dependent students, the costs for those items other than tuition and fees are similar regardless of the type of institution (Table 14). The lowest expenses excluding tuition and fees for a 12-month period (1977-78) for self-supporting students are reported by the public two-year institutions and the highest by the private four-year institutions (Table 15). The increase in total costs for self-supporting students from 1976-77 to 1977-78 ranges from 4.2 percent ($161) at two-year public institutions to 6.6 percent ($387) at four-year private institutions (Table 16). The average dollar increase for these expenses was approximately $280 when all types of institutions were combined.

Expenses by College Board region

The organization of the College Board is divided into six regional areas. The states composing each of the regions are shown on the map printed on page 81. There is a difference of approximately $471 in the tuition and fee charges at public institutions among the six regions (Table 17); the highest charges are reported in the Middle States, and the lowest in the West. Among the various regions the maximum differences in tuition and fees for private institutions is about $909; the Northeast reports the highest charges, and the Southwest the lowest. For proprietary institutions the highest tuition and fee charges are found in the Southwest; the lowest, in the Midwest and the South. The difference in costs between public and private institutions is largest in the Western region ($2,116) and smallest in the Southwest ($1,389). The relative position of the regions remained the same this year as last with respect to tuition and fee charges for both public and private institutions.

Midwest	554	2,274	1,765
Southwest	367	1,756	2,525
West	308	2,424	2,214

Costs other than tuition and fees for the different regions vary some (Table 18) but less than last year. The average difference among the regions for total expenses minus tuition and fees for 1977-78 is about $375 for resident students on campus, $498 for residents living off campus, $260 for commuter students, and $444 for self-supporting students. In the case of resident on-campus students the lowest costs are to be found in the South; the highest, in the West. Residents living in private housing have the highest costs in the West and the lowest costs in the Midwest. Institutions in the Southwest report the highest costs for the commuting student, and those from the Western region for the self-supporting student.

Expenses at specific institutions

It should be noted that costs listed in this book are averages as reported by postsecondary institutions. As averages, the estimates included here may not be appropriate for the particular circumstances of an individual student. The professional financial aid administrator at each institution, when making an estimate of a student's need, generally starts with an average budget for each type of student. After reviewing the needs of an individual student, a specific budget can then be developed to represent that student's real costs for the year. Such individual budgets may differ from the averages presented in this publication.

But the budgets in this book can be used for planning purposes. Students who will need financial assistance to meet college costs must plan ahead. One important step is to apply for financial aid early. As part of the financial aid application process, many institutions ask students to file a Parents' Confidential Statement (PCS) or a Financial Aid Statement (FAF). These statements are used by institutions in determining the need students have for financial assistance. The PCS or FAF are designed to collect information about a family's financial circumstances. A family completes a single form and sends it to the College Scholarship Service where it is analyzed and a report prepared for every institution and scholarship sponsor named on the form. Copies of the PCS or FAF forms are available from guidance counselors in high schools and at community agencies. Following the budget information for most institutions listed in this book is the date by which the institution suggests that the parents send the PCS or FAF to the College Scholarship Service for analysis. The date provided in this publication is intended to assure adequate time for processing by the CSS and for institutional review and award decisions to be made. It should not be interpreted as a deadline date, for many postsecondary institutions may review PCS or FAF forms filed with the CSS after this date. The date may also differ from the deadlines for financial aid applications, which are published by most institutions in their catalog or financial aid publications. Specific information about the application deadlines of an individual institution can be obtained from its financial aid administrators.

Meeting college costs

The responsibility for meeting postsecondary education costs is shared by the student, his parents, the institutions, private donors and agencies, and the various levels of government. This pattern of financing reflects the philosophy that education benefits both the individual and the society. The College Scholarship Service assists institutions and other sources of financial assistance in estimating how much a student and his parents can contribute toward college expenses. This publication is intended to assist in estimating what these expenses will be. Using the student expense budgets found in this book and the procedures for determining an estimated family contribution toward postsecondary costs found in the CSS booklet Meeting College Costs, a student can get a rough idea of his or her financial need. Students who are knowledgeable about postsecondary educational costs, the availability of financial aid, and the steps for applying for these funds should have the best chance of attending the institution of their choice.

Institutions' Estimates of Student Expenses

How the data were collected

The data that follows were collected from institutions by the CSS on a form entitled "Institutional Estimate of Student Expenses for Academic Year 1977-78" (IESE). In cases where CSS had information on file about an institution, it was sent an IESE "turnaround" form to update its information. The listing of institutions includes all those submitting data by January 15, 1977. Those institutions that reported data for the 1976-77 academic year but have not submitted information for 1977-78 are indicated with an asterisk (*). It should be noted that costs may be expected to be higher than shown at those institutions for which there is an asterisk.

The analyses found in the introduction to this book are based only on those institutions providing 1977-78 data for undergraduate students. The number of institutions providing data varies somewhat from year to year, and this variation should be noted when interpreting these data. For 1977-78 there were 1,713 institutions included in the analyses. The distribution of institutions by type and control is similar to that reported in the Education Directory: Colleges and Universities, 1975-76 (Table 19).

Definition of terms

In an effort to collect comparable budget information for guidance purposes, CSS asked institutions to provide information for specifically defined budget items. Thus the figures supplied under each column heading for the institutions listed should represent the following information.

Column 1: Tuition and fees
This figure indicates the tuition and general fees an institution charges to all first-year students based on a nine-month academic year.

Columns 2-5: Student budgets
Total budget expenses are given for four categories of students: resident in both institutional housing and private housing, commuter, and self-supporting. Generally each budget total includes tuition and fees, books and supplies, room and board, transportation, and personal expenses. If an institution did not supply figures for all five components, a total figure is still given if figures were provided for the first two components and at least one of the last three components.

Institutions were requested to submit information only when it applied to their students. For example, if an institution has only commuter students, the resident columns should be blank. When an institution has a range of expenses for any one category—for example, transportation expenses for commuter students—the average expense figure was requested.

For all categories of students, three components of the total budget are defined in the same way:
Tuition and fees—As charged to all first-year students based on a nine-month academic year.
Books and supplies—The average cost for a first-year student.
Personal expenses—The average expenditures for such miscellaneous expenses as clothing, laundry, entertainment, incidental meals, medical insurance, and furnishings.

The definitions of the other two components vary by student category:
Transportation—For the resident budgets, the cost of two round trips from a student's home to the institution. For the commuter and self-supporting budgets, the total costs of transportation to and from the institution during the nine-month period.
Room and board—For the resident institutional-housing budget, the nine-month charges for a student living and eating in facilities operated by the institution. For the resident private-housing budget, the nine-month expenses for dependent students maintaining a residence away from their parents in privately owned housing. For the commuter budget, the nine-month expenses of food for dependent students who live at home with their parents. For the self-supporting budget, the average room and board expenses for a single individual for a 12-month period.

Column 6: Additional out-of-state (district) tuition
This item represents only the additional charge made to students who do not meet state (or district in the case of two-year community colleges) residence requirements.

Column 7: PCS/FAF filing date
The last column gives the date by which an institution suggests that students send the PCS or FAF to the CSS for analysis (see page xii for further information).
